PENITENTIARY NOT TO HOUSE YOUTHS FROM ROCKHILL

Diehl and Bousfield Are To Serve Time in County
Prison

STOLE FOR A THRILL

Couple Who Terrorized The Upper Section of County
Severely Reprimanded

DOYLESTOWN, June 6.—Looking for excitement and to get a "kick" out of life, two East Rockhill township youths, who robbed fourteen homes and business places in a month, narrowly escaped spending the rest of their lives in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

It was within the power of Judge Hiram H. Keller, of the Bucks County Court yesterday to send William Diehl, 30, and John Bousfield, 24, away for the balance of their lives for the crimes they had committed in the short period of one month.

Instead, an application for leniency insofar as not sending the offenders to the Eastern Penitentiary, was granted by Judge Keller, who sentenced both youths to serve not less than five or more than ten years in the Bucks County Prison at Doylestown. Two sentences were imposed for the same term of years but the Court directed that they run concurrently.

Diehl, a married man, has a wife and three small children. They were in court when Judge Keller pronounced sentence. Seated nearby were the parents and grandparents of young Bousfield, heart-broken over what their son had done. Bousfield and Diehl had never been in Court before and Bousfield bore an excellent reputation up to the time he quit work at the Bethlehem Steel Company's plant a month ago and started living with Diehl.

Diehl and Bousfield terrorized the upper-end residents of Bucks county in a series of systematic robberies. They committed burglary in a wholesale manner at night, traveling in Bousfield's automobile. They engaged in a pistol duel with one roadside stand operator, that led to their capture recently.

"I do not believe that you, Bousfield, told the entire truth about this affair," Judge Keller said. "There can be no distinction made between the two of you. I will grant the request that you not be sent to the penitentiary. Neither took your parents, or you, Diehl, your wife and children, into consideration.

"This sentence is not only to punish both of you but it will serve as a warning for others who might want to engage in such business. We will not tolerate wholesale robbing in Bucks county."

Corporal William Francis, of the State Police, who obtained the confession from Bousfield and Diehl, read the signed statement to the Court yesterday. He told how both youths had told him that they took drinks of moonshine whiskey before they robbed a place "to give them more nerve."

Most of the stolen goods, it was testified, have been returned, although several valuable antique pieces stolen from one place near Quakertown were broken and others are missing.

Henry Charles, Joseph Gulden and Albert Butler, of East Rockhill township, testified that they never heard Bousfield's reputation questioned before this.

Robert Bousfield, the father of one of the defendants, said that his son worked steadily up until a month ago when he was laid off because of slack work for a week or two. He said that both he and the boy's mother thought John to be "the best son that ever walked."

On the witness stand, John Bousfield told Judge Keller that it was he who made the original suggestion that they steal a tire for his car and then they started stealing other things because they got away with the first theft. He told Judge Keller that both he and Diehl carried revolvers in order to scare people away that would come after them. Bousfield said that he had known Diehl only six weeks, being introduced to him by Frank Kline.

Schedule Public Hearing In Bridge Building Plans

The application of the Burlington-Bristol Bridge Company for permission to modify the approved procedure for erecting the 540-foot lift span of the bridge across Delaware River, between Burlington, N. J., and Bristol, Pa., general plans for which were approved by the Secretary of War, December 22, 1928, will be considered at a public hearing, on the subject, to be held by G. B. Pillsbury, in the Assembly Room, 11th Floor, Gimbel Building, 35 So. Ninth St., Philadelphia, Pa., on Friday, June 13, 1930, at 10:00 A. M. Daylight-Saving Time.

All interested parties, particularly navigation interests, are invited to be present or to be represented at the above time and place.

The approval of the general plans by the Secretary of War included the condition that no falsework shall be constructed in the draw opening and that this span shall not be closed to navigation for more than twelve hours. The present application is for a modification of this condition to permit the use of falsework which will reduce the available width of opening to 340 feet for a period of eight weeks and decrease the overhead clearance to 66 feet 9 inches during the last ten days of this period.

Plans showing the proposed method of erecting the span may be seen at the office of G. B. Pillsbury, Colonel, Corps of Engineers, District Engineer, Philadelphia.

FORMER BRISTOL GIRL WEDS TRENTON RESIDENT

Miss Gertrude R. Lake Becomes Bride of John
Dailey

BRISTOLIANS ATTEND

A wedding of interest to many Bristolians was that of Miss Gertrude Rita Lake, daughter of Mrs. Mary Lake Bauer, of 19 Kearney avenue, Trenton, who was married yesterday to John Dailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dailey, of 341 Redfern street, Trenton.

The wedding took place in St. Anthony's Church, Olden and Hamilton avenues, Trenton, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph O. M. C., at high mass. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers and the wedding march was played by Mrs. Driber, of Trenton. Mrs. Cullather, of Trenton, sang "Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride was beautifully gowned in bridal satin and Spanish lace, overdraped with tulle. Her tulle veil was cap shaped, trimmed with orange blossoms and pearls. She wore white slippers and stockings and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses.

Miss Rita Woolman, of Trenton, niece of the bride, was bridesmaid and she looked attractive in a gown of flesh colored satin trimmed with Spanish lace and tulle. Her slippers and stockings matched her dress and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

Fred Dailey, Jr., of Trenton, brother of the groom was best man.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, and about seventy-five guests were present. The home was prettily decorated with pink and white crepe paper, palms and cut flowers.

During the day, the happy couple left for a honeymoon to be spent in Atlantic City and they will be away for ten days. The bride wore as her traveling costume, a powder blue ensemble suit, with egg shell color hat, slippers and stockings to match. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Dailey will make their home with Mrs. Dailey's travelling costume, a powder blue ensemble.

The groom's gift to the bride was a red fox neck piece. The bride's gift to her bridesmaid, Miss Woolman, was a beautiful cameo pin, and Mr. Dailey presented a ring to his brother, who was best man.

Mrs. Dailey was born in Bristol and lived here until a few years ago when she moved to Trenton with her family. She was well known and very popular among her Bristol friends. Mr. Dailey is a resident of Trenton and at the present time, is employed in the office of the Trenton Pottery Company.

The bride and groom received many beautiful wedding gifts. Guests attending the wedding were from Trenton, Jersey City, New York, Bristol, Edgely and Philadelphia.

SENATE MAY DETERMINE WHETHER BISHOP CANNON SHALL GIVE INFORMATION TO THE LOBBY COMMITTEE OR NOT; MOVEMENT STARTED TO QUESTION SENATE

Doubt Expressed As to Right of That Committee to Probe
Such Problems — Some Members Express Their Belief in Broader Powers

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS)—The Senate may determine whether Bishop James Cannon, Jr., should tell its lobby committee about his anti-Smith activities in the 1928 presidential campaign.

A move was on foot today to put the question to that body in a request for authority to question Cannon on any subject.

While the defiant bishop was warned his actions in refusing to reply to questions as to his "personal, political activities," along with his abrupt "withdrawal" as a witness might lead to contempt of the Senate proceedings, some doubt was expressed as to the right of the lobby inquiry to probe such matters under present power.

In the light of this, some members believed the best course lay in a demand for broader powers from the Senate.

Such a course, they pointed out, would leave the Methodist leader no course but to reply or face contempt proceedings.

Thus far Cannon, in walking out on the committee and turning down inquiry into his political work has not become liable for proceedings because stalling out of the committee room before a quorum when, just after he departed Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, turned up to join the two members who have attended all through the Cannon hearings. Senators Walsh (D) of Montana, acting chairman and Blaine, (R) of Wisconsin, a wet. Three members form a quorum of the five-man committee. No punitive action is contemplated on Cannon's conduct in leaving the committee flat.

That Cannon will come in for scorching criticism on the floor of the Senate for his action, there remained no doubt. The Committee stood in adjournment following his action in departing as a "voluntary witness." He left in the face of warnings by Walsh he would have to "take your chances on leaving in this manner."

Cannon told the committee he would return when a subpoena was issued and not before. He left to the accompaniment of cheers and hisses from the audience, with warnings of Walsh and Blaine ringing in his ears.

"I'm not on the stand," he replied as a parting shot. "My office is in the Bliss Building. If you desire me to return, issue a subpoena."

The committee contemplated issuing no subpoena pending the return of its chairman, Senator Caraway, (D) of Arkansas. Walsh adjourned the meeting until next Wednesday, when Caraway is expected to be present. At that time the matter of issuing a subpoena for the bishop and of asking broader powers from the Senate will be taken up.

Thus far Caraway has supported Cannon in his contention that the committee was without power to question him concerning expenditures in his anti-Smith campaign work in 1928. From Arkansas he issued a statement when Cannon first turned down committee quizzing along this line, declaring the resolution under which the lobby probe is operating carried no authority for inquiry into campaign expenditures.

FEDERALS NOW TIED FOR SECOND POSITION

Results of Last Night
FEDERALS ... 7 CROYDON ... 2
(By T. M. Juno)

The Federals moved into a tie for second place last evening by defeating the Croydon Boys' Club, 7-2, on St. Ann's field.

With last night's victory Johnny Mulholland's boys have won four games and been defeated but twice. The A. O. H. nine has the same number of wins and losses.

Strikeouts were plentiful in last night's contest. Out of a possible thirty-nine outs, twenty-two were via the strike-out method. Holland, of Croydon, fanned nine, and DeRisi, of the Federals, totaled thirteen.

Thrice during the game DeRisi fanned the side and only one earned run was scored against him—that was in the fourth inning when Groyon and Tranotti slammed doubles to left field.

Holland was in good form but as usual a trifle wild. This combined with a few team-mates' errors led to the scoring of almost all of the Federals' tallies.

Only three stolen bases were recorded during the fray, this being about the lowest in any twilight league game this season and shows the wonderful work of Reese and Lafferty behind the plate. Both nabbed two base-stealers during the seven rounds of milling.

After both teams had zeroes chalked up in the initial round the Federals annexed two runs in the second. With Dietrich out on a fly to center, David lambasted a hit to left for two bases; Wilkinson singled to left and David scored; Leighton rolled to third base who threw wild to first, Wilkinson scoring; Lafferty and DeRisi were strikeout victims.

Croydon's first run was scored in the fourth. Groyon doubled to left; Gleason was called out on strikes; Tranotti also doubled to left and Groyon counted; both Bock and Reese fanned.

Three runs were credited to the Federals in the fourth; Wilkinson was passed; Leighton crossed the entire Croydon infield with a single to left, sending Wilkinson to third; Lafferty struck out; DeRisi slammed a long triple to left, Wilkinson and Leighton registering; McDevitt rolled to Bock who fumbled, scoring DeRisi; McDevitt tried to reach second on the play and went out, Bock to Trindle; Cochran fouled out to Reese.

Croydon scored a lucky run in the fifth. Crossley struck out and was safe at first when Lafferty missed the third strike, Crossley stole second and continued to third when Lafferty made his second error on the same.

Poison and Gun Used To Die as Old Age Nears

NEWTOWN, June 6.—Missing since Saturday night, a Newtown gardener known only as "Dutch" George, was found Wednesday in a lot on Penn street, close to the Reading Railroad station. He had committed suicide by first swallowing poison and then firing a bullet from a revolver into his abdomen.

Boy Scouts of Newtown conducted a search since Monday for the man, but the dead man was located by a Mrs. Bethel, who found him while she was walking across the lot. The revolver with which he shot himself was found lying beside him. The partly emptied bottle of poison was in his pockets.

Known as an expert gardener, George, of late had been doing odd jobs in his line. It is believed that he was despondent because his work had been falling off. He was 55 years of age and had lived here for the past 25 years.

He was last seen Saturday night about 11 o'clock. From the state of the body when found, it was presumed that he ended his life shortly after that hour.

Coroner W. Furman Young, of Bristol, was summoned and issued the burial permit. Death he said was due to poison taken and a bullet wound inflicted with suicidal intent.

A brother, John George, of Philadelphia, employed by the Reading Railroad Company, is his only survivor. The funeral was held Thurs. afternoon from the funeral parlors of Stacy Brown. Interment was in Newtown Cemetery.

COUNTY COURT SUSTAINS JUDGE ALVEY'S RULING

Judge Keller Upholds Action
in Fining Hosiery Mill Workers

MISS MEYERS INNOCENT

DOYLESTOWN, June 6.—In Quarter Session Court of Bucks county yesterday, Judge Hiram H. Keller sustained the decision of Justice of the Peace John Alvey, Woodbourne, who fined three hosiery mill workers $10 and costs on a charge of disorderly conduct following their arrest in May near the Hulmeville Hosiery Mill where union workers declare a lock-out was declared on them.

Earl Anderson, of South Langhorne; William Good, of South Langhorne, and Miss Florence Dunn, of Philadelphia, were the three arrested. They appealed the decision of Justice Alvey. Yesterday the Court heard testimony on both sides. The Commonwealth claimed that Anderson threw a stone through an automobile window and that the others were in the crowd tending to create excitement.

In the appeal of Miss Cecelia Meyers, of Hulmeville, also charged with disorderly conduct, Judge Keller sustained the appeal and reversed the decision of Justice Alvey by declaring the young woman not guilty. The appeal in all cases was made by the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

John R. Christian, of 528 Helleman street, Philadelphia, who was convicted several months ago of a charge of involuntary manslaughter and driving while drunk on the Lincoln Highway near Morrisville, was in court yesterday to withdraw his application for a new trial. Judge E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, sentenced him to pay a fine of $1 and costs and serve from six to 12 months in the county prison on the involuntary manslaughter charge and 30 days on the drunken driver charge.

Christian was charged with the death of Elmer Byhar, a Negro motorcycle rider on the early morning of August 18, last year. Judge Shull directed that the sentences in the case run concurrently.

CRITICIZING THE HOME

An indictment of life in the United States which at least deserves a little serious reflection is made by a former American who has lived a great deal of her life in Europe and has traveled very widely.

She says that Americans find little satisfaction in life, in spite of the mechanical aids to comfort which they have at their disposal, that the American home offers few attractions to the children who grow up in it; and that American health, in spite of high material standards, is inferior to that of Europe.

These are serious indictments, and three that are new to us. While the public is skeptical, it would be interested in the proof and believes that in fairness to it the evidence should be forthcoming. There have been too many generalities indulged in in this super-critical age for the level-headed to exult or be depressed over them.

It has recently been brought out that during the last 12 years nearly half a million American citizens have left the United States to live permanently elsewhere. That is at the rate of 3,000 a month. And since 1908 more than 4,000,000 residents aliens, most of whom looked upon the United States as the land of promise when they came, have gone to other countries to live. This large emigration is in spite of the fact that economic conditions here generally are better than anywhere else in the world. But that doesn't prove our unkind critic right.

AGE OF THE WORLD

There seems to be an eternal and continuous struggle among scientists to figure out the age of the earth. A report of the Smithsonian Institute gives as its opinion that the universe is three billion years old, which would seem to establish a record that not only exceeds all previous guesses hazarded along this line, but which, moreover, sets a standard for future jugglers with figures to shoot at as they attempt to outdo their predecessors.

It is not quite clear to most people why it is so necessary to determine the age of the earth. Here and there new evidences are uncovered by expeditions which have been excavating tombs and ancient ruins for the purpose of studying antiquity. But even the most interesting discoveries do not take the present age back more than a few thousand years at best, and whatever rock place before that period, therefore must be largely a matter of conjecture.

And since so dense mystery beclouds ancient history, it appears that science might very well afford to give more attention to modern problems and their development, rather than search through buried cities and almost forgotten history for information that is on the surface at least of no earthly use to the present age.

When a man can't get a grip on himself, someone else can.

SYNOPSIS
Crouching in her room, above the canteen, in the little settlement in the British Protectorate of East Africa, Dawn listens to weird sounds from below. She is to become the mystic bride of the black god Mungu. From all sides natives pour into the clearing for the strange ritual that will make her sacred. Dawn only wishes she may have a last glimpse of her sweet heart, young Tom Allen. She is desolate to think she is being wrested from him forever. Hasmali, chief priest, assures the natives that their deity is pleased to receive Dawn for voodoo bride. Sister Hedwig and Captain Eric, commanding the German detachment that has seized the settlement, arrive.

INSTALLMENT THREE
Captain Eric was easily upset by any native demonstration. Though a competent soldier and leader, trusted by the natives, nevertheless was more cautious than valiant. His inadequate garrison gave him lively misgivings. His military knowledge told him that his troops vastly outnumbered by the blacks, could not hold the settlement in the event of a revolt of the natives. It at his ridicule. He would have continued to rip her superstitions to tatters had not Sister Hedwig interposed her soft-spoken protest.

"Your daughter," continued the nun in persuasive tones to Mooda, "has studied at our convent. We have taught her Red Cross work; we have taught her how to read."

Mooda nodded a grudging acknowledgment of the nun's helpfulness to Dawn. But always jealous of Dawn's talents, she immediately regretted this admission.

"Dawn is almost like her white sisters," the nun went on. "She loves us and we love her."

"I do for my little Dawn what I think best," said Mooda grimly.

Further argument was interrupted by a sinister call, almost indistinguishable, that came from beyond the clearing. Hearing it most of the natives fled in consternation toward the jungle, their frightened warnings proclaiming the arrival of "kiboko" and "Whip man!" The paper made off, muttering, "Shep Keyes is coming."

Aware that an encounter with Shep Keyes would be unwise at the moment, Captain Eric found it expedient to accompany Mooda and Sister Hedwig into the canteen.

Shep enjoyed a strange lordship in the jungle.

was prudent, therefore, to keep the natives from growing discontent.

But the commander was sometimes cursed with impatience. His German practically brooked no voodoo nonsense such as greeted him when he and Sister Hedwig entered the clearing before the canteen. He grumbled to Sister Hedwig, but she, to whom all life was the exercise of patience, disapproved him from interfering.

"What, exactly, does it all mean?" he demanded.

With some hesitation Sister Hedwig explained the ceremony of the marriage of Mungu. Captain Eric's growing annoyance was mirrored on his countenance, and when he learned that Dawn had been selected as the bride his rage could no longer be contained.

"But you see, Captain Eric," protested Sister Hedwig vainly, "the ceremonies have started. I'm afraid it's already too late to save her."

Ignoring the pleadings of the nun, Captain Eric rushed over to where Mooda stood, his displeasure all too evident in his face. Mooda stiffened in anticipation of his rebuke.

"Mooda, what does this mean?" began the captain heatedly. "I've told you my government will not tolerate any pagan nonsense."

Mooda refused to yield. "It is our religion, Captain Eric," she answered. "You have yours—but we want ours."

"It is part of our religion to see that there are no slaves under a civilized flag," the German officer's tones were edged with sarcasm and he hoped that Mooda would understand the insulting implication of his speech.

Mooda understood, too. She appreciated the facility of exchanging insults with the military command, and resorted to savage stubbornness. "We obey our German fathers in everything," she looked up at the captain to ascertain just how he had received this acknowledgment of German sovereignty. His face expressed nothing.

"But," added Mooda fiercely, "my daughter, Dawn, will be a goddess."

"If no talk about Dawn when that black devil can hear!" insisted Mooda, referring to Shep. And Shep, coming into the clearing in time to hear her, grinned with savage satisfaction to see the white master yield the ground to him.

Shep was a creature of extremely hideous appearance, the countless stories of his insupportable cruelty seeming to impart to his features an additional deformity that some mocking creator had forgotten. A giant in stature, he also was a man of magnificent physique. The fine muscles of his back and upper arms showed under his cotton shirt like untroubled water. His chest bulged forward challengingly, reaching to a trim waist-line whence his legs tapered symmetrically to his rough-knuckled bare feet.

Shep enjoyed a strange lordship in the jungle. His was not an authority bestowed by the two pathetic military crosses he wore pinned to his cotton shirt, but an authority won by strength, cunning and cruelty. The natives, whom he despised, feared him and obeyed him. On such occasions as they failed to do so, they were mercilessly flogged with a long new-hide whip which he always carried. As he sauntered into the clearing he cracked this whip about the ears of the scattered natives who were late in feeling to the jungle.

This cracking whip also served to punctuate his chanted boast that he needed "no brains to hold the reins so long as he had the whip to inflict the pain." He continued, in a voice that almost set the canteen to quivering:

"I am de big boss of dem all. You must bow down to me, black or white."

"Yo got to ben' you knes!" And it was no idle boast, either. This insolent boast of Shep's.

Somewhat Shep had succeeded in dimming his past in two disputed legends, both of which he encouraged and neither of which he disclaimed. At some time in his misty past he had visited Cairo and Paris, and so familiar was he with certain wretched strata of life in those cities he was regarded by the natives as a black blessed with the white man's culture.

COMMUNICATIONS

Editor of the Courier:

Another Memorial Day has passed during which the nation's defenders have been honored and the writer feels that it would be fitting at this time to pay a tribute to the memory of the late lamented Michael Dougherty, who was Bristol's outstanding hero. Very few of the present generation are aware of the fact that living in their midst was one of the most heroic figures in our country's history.

The record of Michael Dougherty was one of the most gallant and heroic in the history of America's great conflicts.

Those who knew him would not think to see this modest, unassuming, quiet-spoken gentleman that he had had such a heroic career.

A visit invited. For folder address Club Residence, 1421 Arch St., Philadelphia.

He had none of the appearances of the fighting man, being as stated, modest and retiring, never talking of his gallant deeds unless questioned about them, which marks the true hero.

Comrade Dougherty was the possessor of the Congressional medal of honor which was bestowed on him by a special act of Congress, this being the highest honor that this government can bestow.

He was a member of Co. B, 13th Pennsylvania Cavalry, and received this decoration for extreme gallantry in action.

Later taken prisoner he was after several months exchanged and returned to his regiment.

After much hard fighting he was again taken prisoner and confined for a period of twenty-three months and seventeen days in the various prisons of the South. At the close of the war he had been confined in Andersonville Prison from which he returned to Bristol, Andersonville being the worst prison in the South and it was there he suffered untold misery. Comrade Dougherty not only served his country bravely in war but upon his return to private life he assumed a responsible position in the U. S. mint in Philadelphia, where for years he served his government as honorably as he had in time of war.

Later he retired from his position in the mint to spend his declining years in peace and quiet with his family.

The record of Comrade Dougherty is an enviable one from early manhood until the time of his passing, not alone as a gallant soldier but as a man of family and as an upright God-fearing man, and an honorable citizen having the respect and admiration not only of his government but of his family, neighbors and fellow citizens.

He was the typical American soldier and gentleman the type of man who with others of his kind have made this country the greatest on earth.

His passing is a great loss not only to his family but to our country and the community where he spent his whole life, and it is but fitting that when he did pass on to his final reward he was the last survivor in Bristol of Post 73, G. A. R.

If I have been correctly informed, there were only sixteen Congressional medals bestowed in the Civil War, this in an army of two and one half millions.

Therefore Comrade Dougherty was not only one of the great heroes of the Civil War but one of the outstanding heroes of our country for all time.

If there is a copy of Comrade Dougherty's War Prison Diary in the Bristol Library it would be well for all who can to read it and learn from that of some of the heroic deeds and suffering of Bristol's own hero, the Honorable Michael Dougherty.

Respectfully submitted by
D. CLINTON SMITH.

What a Different World when Appetite is Keener!

YOUR whole attitude toward food changes when appetite is keen. Your own doctor will tell you it is just as important to enjoy your food as to eat it.
Some folks just eat because it's meal-time. To them, eating is mechanical—a problem, not a pleasure. But what a treat awaits these men and women when once they realize how sharpened appetite lends magic flavor to every blessed morsel.
To dull and drowsy appetites Flaxolyn cries "awake!" It is a sluggish, stubborn appetite indeed, that will not respond to the effective stimulation to the appetite, which Flaxolyn can bring.

But Flaxolyn is not alone an appetizer. It is a formula with other important functions, direct and indirect. Yet Flaxolyn is gentle in its action. It is a combination of dried herbs and bile salts with highly approved medicinal extracts. No drastic or habit-forming drugs.
Flaxolyn contains Sarsaparilla Roots, Valerian (from Belgium), Dandelion Roots, Licorice (from Spain), Aloes (from Barbadoes Islands), Ginger, Senna Leaves, Buchu Leaves (from Africa), and other potent herbs.

Right here in this neighborhood Flaxolyn has proved a tremendous success. Thousands seeking an aid to keener appetite, richer sleep and freedom from temporary constipation's tax upon the body, are today using Flaxolyn. Many of these men and women are your own age.

Perhaps you, too, will benefit by the Flaxolyn formula. Why not try it and see? Flaxolyn is Free if you personally are not convinced it is all and more than claimed for it.
